

THE SOCIETY OF THE BEE-HIVE

By MELLIFICIA. Thursday, Dec. 5, 1912.

SOCIETY women are interested in the Nebraska Suffrage convention which is being held in the council chamber of the city hall, and at each meeting are seen many in handsome street costumes and striking furs.

Not only are they attending the meetings, but they are taking active parts in the meetings.

Many of the arrangements have been made by the women while they were attending teas and luncheons. But this week many of the women have canceled their engagements for the two days of the convention and will attend the meetings rather than attend the social affairs.

At the city hall to welcome the guests Wednesday morning were Mrs. John N. Baldwin, who is chairman of committee of arrangements, and ex-president of the Equal Franchise society, which is made up of a membership of many of the prominent society women of the city. Mrs. Baldwin was stunning in a purple street costume and wore handsome moleskin furs.

Mrs. Charles Kountze, who is chairman of the reception committee, received the delegates to the convention and was gowned in a beautiful street suit of taupe velvet and wore furs of pointed fox. Mrs. Kountze's handsome seven-passenger limousine motor car has been at the disposal of the visiting suffragists since their arrival Wednesday morning.

Miss Arabella Kimball, who is a delegate from the Equal Franchise society, is attending all of the meetings. Wednesday afternoon she was beautifully gowned in brown velvet.

A pretty feature of the decoration was the grotto in the basement. The stairway leading to the grotto formed an archway covered with autumn leaves. Frozen punch was served in the grotto.

American Beauty roses and white chrysanthemums made a pretty decoration for the living room where the guests were received. In the dining room yellow chrysanthemums were used and a large silver vase and six smaller vases filled with Mrs. Ward rosebuds formed an attractive centerpiece for the table.

In the sun room were pink roses and chrysanthemums and all through the rooms southern smilax and other foliage was used.

Suffragists Hear Angry Words from the Commissioners

City Commissioners McGovern and Ryder exchanged uncompromising remarks before the delegates to the Nebraska Suffrage association yesterday. McGovern objected to a resolution granting the water board a permit to connect a blowoff at Twenty-eighth avenue and Sprague street. The board granted the permission during McGovern's absence.

McGovern declared it would be dangerous and refused to issue a permit. The resolution granting the permission to the water board was reconsidered. Water Commissioner Howell was called in and said upwards of 200 such connections had already been made by the old water company.

Ryder moved a resolution directing McGovern's office to issue the permit. Immediately McGovern charged Ryder with too much activity and said he would refuse to do it anyway. Ryder retorted that the commission would make McGovern act. With only McGovern dissenting the commission approved Ryder's resolution.

The suffragists listened to the arguments with keen interest. Those in the far corners of the council chamber edged a little nearer to hear and see how city commissioners conducted themselves. "I wonder if the women will fight like this when they come into power," mused Mayor Dahlman.

Nature's Method of Lighting the Best

"Modern, up-to-date lighting ideas are to get the nearest approach to Nature's way of lighting," said Dr. Frederick Millner in speaking before the Omaha Electric club at the Commodore club. "From time immemorial it has been the problem of the illuminating engineer, no matter how primitive, to copy as nearly as possible conditions of daylight.

Whether rods were used, pitch torches, dip candles, oil lamps, gas or the most modern illuminants, the object was to form a certain result as to brilliancy, uniformity of shade, or to other words, a natural distribution. The advancement in the art of illumination is so rapid that books on the subject but a short time off the press are obsolete.

"We get our most effective lessons from Nature. If you are out under the open sky you would not read a book under the direct rays of the sun—you would go under the shade of a tree. Similarly, if in your office you get too strong a direct ray from the sun through your window, you would pull your curtain. Take for example the best known light for the artist to work by, the north skylight effect, which gives you the best possible daylight diffusion. This is the best possible daylight effect for the illuminating engineer to copy.

"To get this perfect diffusion with various degrees of intensities, numerous methods can be used, they can be divided into two main classes. By reflecting light and by passing light through translucent substances, so as to get the most perfect diffusion.

"Many people believe that if you use indirect illumination you must use more wattage. This is not true. The majority of installations do not have light enough to start with. It is a well known fact that visual acuity or seeing efficiency does not, as many people yet believe depend upon the intensity of illumination, but on its even distribution and the amount the eye can bear without strain.

Turns On the Gas; Misses His Steamer

Joe Esenrot will not catch the steamboat on which he intended to return to Sunny Italy because he turned on the gas and went back to bed for another nap.

Esenrot, who is a laborer, living at 907 South Tenth street, left orders to be called at 5 yesterday morning, as he wanted to be in plenty of time to catch his train. He got up, stretched, yawned and concluded that he could spare a few moments more, so he crawled back in the hay.

When found an hour later his room was full of gas and Joe was unconscious. Police surgeons revived him and say that he will be able to start on his journey soon.
